Guidelines for Authors

- Manuscripts submitted for publication must meet the usual scholarly standards and requirements. Particular attention is paid to logical consistency and clarity of reasoning, and to the use of literature and other documents supporting arguments or hypotheses.
- Manuscripts must be submitted in electronic form in a common text format (docx, doc, odt, rtf; but no pdf files!).
- The manuscript must include an abstract describing as precisely and shortly as possible the content of the article (e.g., questions, methods, results, conclusions). It also must include some keywords.
- Tables and figures must be attached on separate sheets and numbered consecutively. They must be made available in reproducible, good printing quality. For each illustration or table, inscriptions, explanations and, if applicable, source references must be attached on a separate sheet.
- Footnotes are allowed but should be used sparingly.
- Literature references follow the APA (7th edition) style. References must be made in the main text in author-date format. In the bibliography at the end of the article, all references are to be listed in alphabetical order by authors' surnames. For precise citation, please consult the stylesheet provided on the Gesellschaft für Anomalistik web pages. For more detailed instructions, see: <https://www.anomalistik.de/en/zeitschrift-fuer-anomalistik/guidelines-for-authors/guidelines-for-authors-of-articles>
- The author retains the copyright for the submitted text. However, with a submission of a text, the Journal of Anomalistics is assigned the right of first publication in printed and electronic form. In addition, the Gesellschaft für Anomalistik and the IGPP is entitled to offer the texts in electronic and printed form for an unlimited period of time on their websites and as part of subscriptions.
- All submitted manuscripts are subject to an double-blind peer-review process. Manuscripts that are acceptable in principle but do not quite meet the required standards will either be returned for revisions, and/or edited to be published following the author's approval of edits.
- In order to promote scholarly discussion, in addition to anonymous peer review the editors will usually invite critical comments on a manuscript accepted for publication from other experts. Authors should assume that such commentaries will be published together with their article, and will have the opportunity for author responses.
- Before the article is approved for printing, authors receive proofs for any final corrections, but the content of the article can no longer be modified.
